I plan to go into sales one day and it's very important as a sales person to be confident in the product that you're selling. I think I'm great at engaging and having a conversation with someone one on one directly. Whenever it comes to talking to a group of people or presenting or demonstration of a product that you're selling, it's very important to show that you're confident in your public speaking skills. Another key skill that I really want to carry into medical equipment sales would be leadership. I've had the privilege of being in several leadership roles in jobs and within organizations at my university but I want to continue to build off of the leadership skills that I have now so that one day I can lead my own sales team. ^M00:00:56 [Music]
