

Onscreen Assessment for International GCSE/A level

*Exams that work
the way students do*

The overwhelming response from students is that they really enjoyed taking their exams onscreen.”

Samantha Roden, Head of English,
Qatar International School

THE NATURAL CHOICE FOR STUDENTS

Onscreen assessment is the natural evolution in a world where so much teaching and learning is onscreen. Students love sitting their exams in a format that is familiar to them.

Offering students the choice to sit either onscreen or paper exams ensures the best possible outcomes, preparing them for the workplace and further education.

Students love it

90% of students who sat their exams onscreen in 2022 said they wanted their school to offer more onscreen exams in the future.

- ✓ "I had more time to plan"
- ✓ "I could write more"
- ✓ "I felt more confident in the exam"

If I had the choice to take an exam onscreen or on paper, I would definitely choose to take it onscreen because I personally feel like I have much more time to plan and get my thoughts straight. And that makes my outcome of a much better quality."

Maya Almoataz,
Year 11 Student,
British School of Bahrain

Teachers love it

100% of teachers who registered students for onscreen exams in 2022 have registered students for the 2023 onscreen exam series too.

- ✓ Easy to organise and manage
- ✓ Boosts student confidence
- ✓ Excellent support from Pearson

It's been a fantastic experience for us as a school and also for our students, who were absolutely delighted to work in a way that felt most comfortable to them."

YOUR TRIED AND TRUSTED PARTNER IN ONSCREEN ASSESSMENT

Pearson is proud to be leading the way in onscreen assessment. We are the first awarding body to offer onscreen International GCSE/A level exams alongside traditional paper-based exams.

Deliver with confidence

The technology, processes, and tools used, stem from the successful worldwide delivery of millions of onscreen assessments in the last 10 years, in more than 115 countries.

What started as a pilot in 2020, became a reality in 2022 when students sat their Pearson Edexcel International GCSE English Language exams onscreen for the first time.

In 2023, we have seen entry numbers double for onscreen exams as thousands of students around the world have chosen to take their International GCSE exams onscreen not on paper.

A rich heritage in onscreen assessment

Our rich heritage and experience of developing and delivering onscreen assessments at scale with the Pearson Test of English, the Egyptian Ministry of Education and our new GCSE Computer Science qualification, have ensured our onscreen platform is tried and tested.

It's a platform you can trust.

To another teacher I would say trust the process and trust that Pearson will support you.”

HOW IT WORKS

Pearson's secure onscreen assessments are the same as the paper-based assessments. The same questions are answered but the method of responding is different onscreen as candidates type their responses. Candidates will take their assessments at a centre, under exam conditions, working on devices.

SECTION A: Reading

Remind yourself of this passage taken from the Pearson Edexcel International GCSE English Anthology.

Whistle and I'll Come to You (from The Woman in Black)

During the night the wind rose. As I had lain reading I had become aware of the stronger gusts that blew every so often against the casements. But when I awoke abruptly in the early hours it had increased greatly in force. The house felt like a ship at sea, battered by the gale that came roaring across the open marsh. Windows were rattling everywhere and there was the sound of moaning down all the chimneys of the house and whistling through every nook and cranny.

At first I was alarmed. Then, as I lay still, gathering my wits, I reflected on how long Eel Marsh House had stood here, steady as a lighthouse, quite alone and exposed, bearing the brunt of winter after winter of gales and driving rain and sleet and spray. It was unlikely to blow away tonight. And then, those memories of childhood began to be stirred again and I dwelt nostalgically upon all those nights when I had lain in the warm and snug safety of my bed in the nursery at the top of our family house in Sussex, hearing the wind rage round like a lion, howling at the doors and beating upon the windows but powerless to reach me. I lay back and slipped into that pleasant, trance-like state somewhere between sleeping and waking, recalling the past and all its emotions and impressions vividly, until I felt I was a small boy again.

Then from somewhere, out of that howling darkness, a cry came to my ears, catapulting me back into the present and banishing all tranquillity.

I listened hard. Nothing. The tumult of the wind, like a banshee, and the banging and rattling of the window in its old, ill-fitting frame. Then yes, again, a cry, that familiar cry of desperation and anguish, a cry for help from a child somewhere out on the marsh.

There was no child. I knew that. How could there be? Yet how could I lie here and ignore even the crying of some long-dead ghost?

'Rest in peace,' I thought, but this poor one did not, could not.

After a few moments I got up. I would go down into the kitchen and make myself a drink, stir up the fire a little and sit beside it trying, trying to shut out that calling voice for which I could do nothing, and no one had been able to do anything for... how many years?

As I went out onto the landing, Spider the dog following me at once, two things happened together. I had the impression of someone who had just that very second passed me on their way from the top of the stairs to one of the other rooms, a tremendous blast of wind hit the house so that it felt as if it had seemed to rock at the lights went out. I had not bothered to pick up my torch from the bedside as I stood in the pitch blackness, unsure for a moment of my bearings.

Person who had gone by, and who was now in this house with me? I had seen nothing. There had been no movement, no brush of a sleeve against mine, no rattle of the air. I had not even heard a footstep. I had simply the absolutely certain impression just having passed close to me and gone away down the corridor, a narrow corridor that led to the nursery whose door had been so firmly shut then, inexplicably, opened.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is the difference between onscreen and paper-based exams?

The exam papers are exactly the same. The only difference is that one is onscreen and the other on paper.
